BULL MOOSE HERD

STERLING MACHINE*Prohibitionists Also in Deal to Swing Support to Higbee.*DAWSON AND GADDIS TO QUIT*Higbee, It is Said, Will Make Strong Anti-Liquor Plea, but Nothing is
Said About Activities of 'Wicked
Partner and Political Manager.'

Negotiations are pending for the withdrawal of J. W. Dawson, Washington party candidate for state senator, and Albert Gaddis, prohibition candidate for the same office, in favor of E. C. Higbee, the Democratic nominee, in current political gossip and is not denied by Higbee. Just prior to his departure today on an eastern automobile trip with his law partner, Bruce E. Sterling, Higbee intimated that he might have something to say about the matter on his return, but declined to make any comment.

Reports in Uniontown are to effect that the deal was concluded yesterday. Higbee denied knowledge of this. "There has been a good bit of talk," he said, but declined to elucidate the nature of the deal, or to discuss the matter in a watchful waiting policy.

A report published in a Pittsburgh paper this morning is to effect that Higbee has pledged himself to resign again in behalf of an applicant for a liquor license, or to over defend in any manner the liquor cause in any form. The Democratic candidate declined to comment on this, but he was careful to make no denial of the statement. It is significant, however, that his law partner and political manager, Bruce E. Sterling, the Democratic boss of the county, is not mentioned as being lined up with the dry forces, except for certain political reasons. In the past, he has been the representative of the liquor interest of the law firm, and evidence brought out during the Umbel impeachment indicated that he had quite a personal working with the liquor people when it came to raising campaign funds.

Concerning the anti-liquor feature of the Democratic-Washington-Prohibition deal, candidates have stated today that it fitted in with the platform, as the state Democratic platform is for local option, and his personal sentiments are in that direction. The deal does not alter the political situation in any extent. Dawson and Gaddis were not sufficient to cause any of the other candidates to lose sleep, and Gaddis, as prohibition candidate, would have received but a handful of votes. If the Democrats figure the Bull Moose ticket the balance of power they are likely to be distributed on election day.

It is not expected that the Bull Moose following will withdraw over the deal. Those who are sincere in their progressive beliefs are certain to stay being and on by their principles. The Republicans who have Bull Moose leaning, to some extent, will come back into the old party ranks as a rebuke to those who would make the Bull Moose party an annex of the Democratic party, and incidentally a good many old line Democrats will prefer to go along with the proposition to turn the party over to the prohibitionists.

Instead of strengthening his party, it is generally considered that the Marshall Sterling has weakened it. The news of the deal leaked out before it had been intended to make the announcement. Had it been so all to keep the arrangement secret until the election, the deal might have been possible to trap many unsuspecting voters, but there is no chance now.

The details now being worked out provide for the withdrawal of both Dawson and Gaddis, and the substitution of Higbee's name on both tickets. The action is, of course, a travesty on the sentiment of the direct primary," observed a thoughtful citizen. "The central idea of the primary is that the people elect the politicians, and the politicians elect the people. The present day Democracy is concerned with the national end of the party, and in Pennsylvania A. Mitchell Palmer and Bruce E. Sterling, the original barefoot boys, are handling the situation in the interest of themselves and the other boys."

CIVIL SERVICE HIT AGAIN.President Example of Experts in Department of Commerce.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—President Wilson's executive order exempting from civil service 14 commercial experts in the Department of Commerce was protested today by the National Association of Manufacturers. Officials of the department said it did not affect the status of the commercial men who are to go in the testings and embarking abroad. They will submit to examination as provided in the pending legislative bill.

Fourth Auto Victim Dies.
JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 7.—Mrs. James Taylor, the fourth victim of the automobile accident near Staytown last Sunday, died in the hospital here today. John J. Hildinger, whose wife accompanied her in the car, yesterday was reported to be dying, and is in the same hospital.

WALL STREET MAN REFUSES
PLACE ON THE BANKING BOARD*Paul M. Warburg Asks President to Withdraw His Name; Declines to be "Investigated."

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Paul M. Warburg of New York today formally requested President Wilson to withdraw his nomination to be a member of the Federal reserve board. The President will do so today. Mr. Warburg, a member of the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., was nominated for a four year term. When the Senate banking committee began examining personally all the five candidates nominated by the President, Mr. Warburg indicated he did not wish to be questioned by the committee as a condition to taking the appointment. Today he called the White House offices by telephone and personally requested the President to withdraw his nomination.

There was no indication who the President might choose to fill the place. The change in personnel, however, will not further delay the actual organization of the new currency system. The Senate already has confirmed W. P. G. Harding, A. C. Miller and Charles S. Hamlin as members of the board and they, with Secretary McAdoo and Comptroller Williams, who serve as members ex officio, constitute a quorum which now may proceed with the work.

HUERTA FACES MUTINYHis Troops About Vera Cruz, Rebel-ling, Funston Says.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Brigadier General Funston in dispatch to the War Department confirmed reports of a mutiny in Huerta's forces before the American outpost at Vera Cruz. He reported the Mexican commander informed him of the uprising and of the threat of his mutineers to attack the Americans.

If an attack should be made in view of the Mexican commander's action in notifying General Funston it is regarded as "an attack under orders."

General Funston also reported that marine private Heinrich Thobe, who recently mysteriously disappeared, was within the Mexican lines and unharmed but gave no details.

Mexican, Mex., July 6.—Wireless to San Diego, Cal., July 7.—In the fighting yesterday outside of Guaymas the Constitutionalists were repulsed with considerable loss, according to a dispatch received. Skirmishing continued today.

Rear Admiral Howard exchanged today official calls with Governor Amador La Paz at Mazatlan.

WELSH A FAVORITEBetting Odds are on Him to Defeat
Ritchie for Title.*By Associated Press.

LONDON, July 7.—Fred Welsh, lightweight champion of England, and William Ritchie, lightweight champion of the world, arrived in London this morning from their training camps for their fight tonight in the great Olympia Arena.

Welsh was favorite at the betting by a slight margin, probably due to the support his Welsh compatriots have been giving him at Cardiff, where most of the betting so far has been 5 to 4 in his favor.

Father Jodier is to act as master of ceremonies at the match, the Bishop of Stuyvesant having objected to the Reverend Dabry's officiating. Eugene Corri is to be the referee.

The fight was scheduled at the Olympia this afternoon when Ritchie weighed 134 pounds while Welsh was just able to get within the stipulated limit of 135 pounds.

WILLIAMS CONTRADICTEDGold Mine Promoter Offers Evidence

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Comptroller Williams, before a Senate committee today investigating charges of misuse of official letterheads for promotion of a North Carolina mining project, reiterated his previous statement that he had no interest whatever in the property and denied that he ever arranged a conference between the promoter and a prospective buyer.

W. G. Newman, the promoter, contradicted testimony of Comptroller Williams when he had received in communication about the mine from Newman except a few telegrams. Newman offered to produce letters, but Senator Thompson, chairman of the committee, declined to receive them. Senator Clegg objected that the letters should be produced.

SCHOOL BOARD WILL REQUIRE OFFICERS TO SERVE WITHOUT PAY*Secretary and Treasurer to Get No Salary Hereafter.*CLERK TO DO DETAIL WORK*Principal's Assistant Will Perform the Duties of Secretary, Excepting the Signing of Warrants; Book to Keep Treasurer's Books; Teacher Elected.

The school board last night voted to give the secretary and treasurer of the board, both of whom are directors, no salary for their services during the coming year. The board will try the experiment for a time and determine whether it is practicable. Heretofore the secretary has received $400 a year, and has earned it. The treasurer has been paid $150, but the board in which the school funds were kept has usually done the bookkeeping. The secretary's duties will be performed by the clerk to the superintendent of schools with the lone exception of signing the warrants and the minute book.

The matter was discussed by the school directors at some length before the meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock. It was decided to advance the salary of Miss Camilla Munk, clerk to Superintendent Asher, from $50 to $75, and assign to her the task of doing the routine work which develops upon the secretary. When the board reconvenes for the year both C. W. Hays and Lloyd J. Shaw were re-elected to their old positions of secretary and treasurer, respectively. In regard to the action as to salaries, the directors explained that they did not think it advisable to have any member on the board receive a salary.

Miss Louise Sherrick was elected to fill the place of Miss Jeanette DeHaven. She will receive a salary of $155. Misses Anna Laffey, Agnes O'Donnovan and Hazel Webber were granted permanent status certificates. The property committee reported that all the seats in the Third and Fourth wards, the high school and the Fourth street school on the West Side have been painted and those in the Seventh street building will be finished tomorrow. The question of a toilet for the Seventh street school was also brought up. It is badly needed as the one now in use is antiquated. It was left to the property committee to decide what will be done.

Tax Collector H. C. Norton was given power to close up the tax duplicates for the year. Mr. Norton expects to have his report ready soon and will meet the board when the special meeting of the property committee is called. It was suggested that the duplicates of Tax Collector C. M. Miller be gone over by the board to determine how much is due. The finance committee was ordered to investigate. The reports of the treasurer and secretary was held over.

The contract for the combination wood-chipping machine and lathe, with all accessories, was awarded to the Briggs Machinery Company of Pittsburgh. The company will install the machine ready for use for $723.31. A visit to a planning mill at Mount Pleasant the property committee saw a similar machine in operation and was satisfied that it would be a help to the manual training department. The property committee will make a visit to Donora next week to inspect the portable building the board proposes to try out here.

The new water-proof canvas tent, which will house the Redpath-Brookway Chautauqua, to be held under the auspices of the Woman's Culture Club of Connellsville, July 14 to 20, will be pitched on the lot at the corner of South Pittsburgh street and Cedar avenue, on next Monday afternoon. TO MAKE LIGHT TESTWest Penn Ready to Install Tungsten Street Lamps.

Preparations have been completed by the West Penn Electric Company to install a number of tungsten lamps at points in the business and residential sections of the city in order that the city may decide whether they are preferable to the present arc lights. The lamps are to be erected on Main street at each side of the river, and on Green street, in the residential section. Some trouble was experienced by the West Penn in securing the site lights desired.

As a proper test, the new lights are to be installed in the city's needs and the old ones, which may enter into a contract to change the entire system. In the meantime the Chamber of Commerce's much discussed "White Way" seems to have passed quietly out of existence.

WIFE IS DISCHARGED.Connitts Mayor That He Was Not in

BACK COPS; PUNISH
RIOTERS, IS ORDER*City Will Furnish Attorney for Policeman Who was Beaten.*CHIEF TO SPREAD THE DRAGNET*Ordered to Bring Into Court All of Those Who Participated in or Encouraged Attack on Policemen Last Friday Night; Hearing Tonight.

Declaring that it will go any limit to suppress rioting and lawlessness in any action he may take to apprehend and punish those who participated in the assault upon him last Friday night, city council last night passed a comprehensive resolution authorizing him to employ an attorney at the city's expense to conduct the case for him.

Rockwell Dull, William Kelly and Bernard Stillwagon are mentioned in the resolution, but all those who were in the crowd that kicked and pummeled Gelfer as he rolled about the ground attempting to subdue Dull are to be arrested if their identity can be established. A second resolution directed Chief of Police Bowers to secure the names of all persons who participated in the disturbance, and those who refused to aid the police in maintaining order. The city will also bear the cost of repairing the damage done to the patrolman's clothing.

The resolutions on the subject were introduced by Councilman John Gans who declared that the riot of Friday night was an outrage for which the penal code carries no adequate punishment.

"We want to make it plain," said Mr. Gans, "that the city will not stand for such things as that but no matter what it costs we will take steps to effectually break up any such practices. We have good officers and we want to encourage them and show that we appreciate their efforts."

Councilman Hooper supported Mr. Gans' statements. Mayor Marietta and Mr. Dugan also expressed themselves as strongly in favor of strong action in the matter. The mayor asked to be excused from voting on the resolution because of the peculiar position the participation of young Dull has placed him.

Patrolman Gelfer explained to council how the affair began, telling of the antagonism of the crowd and of the attack upon him when he was down. Mr. Gans brought out the fact that the three imposed on Dull and Kelly had not been paid.

"They will be," declared the mayor. "The records don't show it," rejoined Mr. Gans.

"Well, I'll see that they do; you needn't worry about that," declared Mr. Marietta.

Mayor Marietta told the newspapermen this morning that the action of Councilman Hooper supported Mr. Gans' statements. Mayor Marietta and Mr. Dugan also expressed themselves as strongly in favor of strong action in the matter.

"I did all that," declared the mayor, "and I have instructed the police that any they bring in for participating in the riot will be fined. Bernard Stillwagon will be in for a hearing at 7:30 o'clock tonight."

The mayor added that the police have orders to call upon any citizen for aid in making an arrest. If he refuses, the mayor said, he is to be arrested and fined.

Nine paving ordinances were introduced, four of them on petition of two-thirds of the frontage of the respective streets and live without petition.

The following paving projects can be put through after five days: Apple street, Prospect to Main; Morrell avenue to city limits; Cottage avenue, Main to Apple; South Pittsburgh to city limits.

Forced ordinances that must be advertised for 30 days before final passage are the following: Ashman avenue to city limits; Baldwin avenue, Pittsburgh to East Park bridge; North Pittsburgh street to city line; Plunkett alley, Snyder to Main; Ashman avenue to end of present paving.

Petitions for the Morrell avenue and for the South Pittsburgh street paving were presented at the meeting. The other petitions had been previously filed.

Residents on Ashman avenue, where the grade will be changed, are to be given an opportunity for a hearing on Monday, July 26. Notices are to be served on all property owners on streets where paving is contemplated to lay sewer connections, and on the gas and water companies to lay their lines to the curb as well as make any needed repairs before the paving begins.

The connection with the paving matters, Superintendent of Streets Hooper asked if it would not be better economy to repay North Pittsburgh street instead of repaving it. The street is in such bad condition, he said, that it will hardly do any good to patch it. Incident to this, Mr. Gans informed council that the labor bill for street repairs so far this year has been $724. No action was taken on Mr. Hooper's suggestion.

A report from Alderman W. D. Colborn, who compiled the tax duplicate, showed the total revenue for 1914 to be $73,552.68, apportioned as follows: Wards, Gen. Fund, sinking fund, first $11,081.51, $5,431.03, $1,555.21, second $1,722.45, $719.58, $800.1, third $7,700.50, $3,000.70, $1,239.48, fourth $8,948.15, $3,282.98, $1,043.44, fifth $5,960.15, $2,756.52, $349.00.

BOARDERS FLEE WHEN HOTEL
AT ROARING RUN BURNS*Four House Is Totally Destroyed by Fire; $150 in Cash is Consumed.

About 20 boarders at the Foust Hotel at Roaring Run were driven out about 1:30 o'clock last night by a fire which completely destroyed the hotel, entailing a loss of approximately $2,000. Edward Foust, the proprietor, had retired when the fire broke out and he was compelled to flee from his room in his night clothes, leaving behind a pair of trousers containing $150. No trace of the money was found.

There was no fire-fighting apparatus available to fight the flames, which spread rapidly. A good deal of furniture and personal possessions of the guests, however, was saved. The surrounding buildings were saved by constant vigilance. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it apparently started in the attic and burned downward. The frame structure was easy prey to the flames.

The Foust Hotel was a well known resort for summer boarders and there were about 10 of these there at the time, in addition to 10 regular boarders the proprietor and his wife.

WOMEN PROSECUTEDThree Give Bail to Answer Charges in Church Trouble.

Three of the women who are alleged to have prevented John Strangy from taking his place as organist at the first mass in St. John's Slavish Roman Catholic Church on Sunday were arraigned before Alderman Fred Munk last night on a charge of creating a disorder in church and contempt of order. The city will also bear the cost of repairing the damage done to the patrolman's clothing.

The defendants, Mary Lipovsky, Maria Spagar and Susanna Mayher, were held in the city jail for the sum of $300 each for court bond, being furnished by Michael Spagar, husband of one of the defendants. Mrs. Mayher is from Lelansburg.

The trouble in the church is said to be over the discharge of the old organist, Father Filkorn today called attention to the fact that John Strangy, the new organist, served for five years in the same capacity and all such persons as were employed about the altar or the church.

PICKING CAMP SITEAdvance Guard Invades Mountains; West Siders Getting Busy.

A party consisting of O. S. Sarver, C. M. Maxwell and Henry Porter left this morning in an automobile for Sonnerfield, where they will try to locate a site for their camp. In former years this party has always camped inside the Maryland border, but owing to the new law imposing a $5 license on fishermen who fish in spots in Pennsylvania, they expect to leave here the last of July and spend a two weeks' outing in the mountains.

The West Side Camping Club will leave here about August 1 for their outing. They will set up the tents at the usual place in Maryland and walk to the Pennsylvania line which is only about a half-mile away. The club will be accompanied by the West Side Junior Camping Club.

FREEDPORT, N. Y., July 7.—Private and county detectives continued today their investigation of the murder of Mrs. Louise Brown, who was mysteriously shot in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman. The inquest into the murder, adjourned yesterday, is to be resumed tomorrow provided the material is ready for the coroner's hands by the grand jury.

Dr. Carman said today that he welcomed the arrival last night of the head of a national detective agency and his man. If the county had not hired this man, he would have done so when the inquest was over," he said. "I hope he can find the guilty person, and I will give him all the help I can."

BETTER PAY URGEDEducators Point to Unfair Salaries

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 7.—"The indifference of the public to all forms of intellectual effort is the discouraging characteristic of our time," declared Charles W. Dabney, president of the National Educational Association today. "The rich man who employs a $25,000 lawyer, or a $10,000 physician," the speaker said, "regards a $1,500 college professor as good enough to train his own."

Grace C. Strachan, district superintendent of schools, Brooklyn, N. Y., spoke on equal salaries. She took a firm stand on the question and contended that a salary should be based on the position and not the sex.

Walter Moore.*DIVISION OF MELON IS CAUSE*Grey Boy Charged Companions With

Profits and is Wounded When he Goes for His Part of the Device.

A quarrel over a Ferris wheel and the proceeds collected from it resulted seriously for several West Side boys last evening when Robert Grey, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Grey of Eighth street was stabbed in the neck last evening by Walter Moore who is about the same age.

The cutting took place in an alley back of the Grey home and the quick work of Samuel Hildebrand, a neighbor, in placing his finger over the cut, probably saved the life of the boy. Dr. McKee was called immediately and dressed the wound. A blood vessel was severed. The youngster is resting easily today.

A partnership, consisting of Robert Grey, the victim, Howard Ensley, Walter Moore and William Hanlon, who lives in Pittsburgh, was formed and a small Ferris wheel and slide were constructed. They charged so much for several rides and the money was spent on a watermelon.

It is alleged that the Grey boy was cut out when it came to dividing the melon. He went to take his share of the wheel and was resisted. Walter Moore boy was cutting a part of the wheel and Grey rushed in on him. Striking back with the hand that held the knife, Moore severed the vein on the right side of Robert's neck. The scene was witnessed by several people.

Information was made against the boy this morning by Jeremiah Grey, the father, before Alderman O'Donovan of the West Side. The hearing will be held this evening.

DISPLAY OF PHOTOSAction Pictures of Fayette Field Meet

There are two unusually good photographic displays by local camera manipulators in Main street show windows. Four pictures of the field meet on Saturday afternoon, taken by E. Gansware are on exhibition in Horner's window. Two views of James Shea making the high jump, one of Orland Leighty winning the 100-yard dash and one of Dewey Miller winning the 110-pound class 100-yard dash, with Harold Horne just behind. The originals were taken with a 2 1/2 by 3 1/2 camera and enlarged four times. For action pictures they could hardly be surpassed.

Rembrandt was also seen in pictures taken by Ray Neville along the French river are shown in C. E. Thomas' window. They, too, are splendid examples of photographic art, especially those which have been hand-colored. Some beautiful scenes are included. Mr. Porter was along on the trip during which the pictures were taken.

There is a fitted yoke which narrows at the front and crossing, terminating in navy blue silk tassels. Into this yoke the main body of the cape is gathered.

HERE IS GOOD NEWS FOR STOMACH VICTIMS

Some very remarkable results are being obtained by using the stomach, liver and intestinal troubles with pure vegetable oil, which exert a cleansing, soothing and purifying action upon the lower bowels, removing the obstructions of poisonous food matter and gases and preventing their absorption into the blood. This done, the food is allowed free passage from the stomach, fermentation ceases and stomach troubles quickly disappear.

George H. May, for 20 years a leading Chicago druggist, cured himself and many of his friends of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles of years, standing by this treatment, and so successful was the remedy he devised that it has since been placed in the hands of druggists all over the country, who have sold thousands of bottles.

Though absolutely harmless, the effect of the medicine is sufficient to convince any one of its remarkable effectiveness and within 24 hours the sufferer feels like a new person. May's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is now sold here by A. A. Clarke, Adv.

NEW POSTER UP

Latest One Describes the Life of a Boy Scout.

More of the artistic posters made up by the National Bill Posting Association have appeared in town and the first has been put up by Manager Fred Robbins on the board facing the postoffice. It is decidedly pretty, depicting incidents in the life of a Boy Scout. Its coloring is beautiful and the white border space makes the effect a striking one.

This is the third of a series of posters printed at great expense and distributed throughout the country for purely educational purposes, the idea being to show that bill boards can be made beauty spots in a community.

The first was a painting of the Nativity, which appeared at Christmas time, and the second scene in the life of General Grant.

U. P.'s Win Game.

The United Presbyterians won their first game of the season last night from the M. F.'s by the score of 7 to 2. There was much rejoicing in the victor's camp on the head of it.

HOW TO ERADICATE ALL SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Advice by a Skin Specialist.

As soon as women of today learn that permanent removal of unsightly, repulsive hair growth can only be gained by reaching the hair root and not by using common, worthless depilatories such as burning pastes, powders, evil-smelling liquids, etc., the better it will be for their happiness and safety. Nor can the electric needle be depended upon to give satisfactory results without danger of horrible scars or facial paralysis. The best means I have ever found that never fails to remove all signs of disgusting growths of hair on the face, neck, arms or hands in a simple, inexpensive preparation called Mrs. Osgood's Wonder. It is absolutely harmless, cannot injure the skin or complexion and in a surprisingly large number of cases has succeeded in killing the hair down to the very roots, source of all growth. When the roots are killed a more hair can grow. You can get Mrs. Osgood's Wonder from Graham & Co., or any up-to-date druggist or department store. Shred Money-Back guarantee with every package. Let me caution you, however, not to apply this treatment except where total destruction of hair is desired.—Adv.

SCOTSDALE

Special to The Courier
SCOTSDALE, July 7.—Council met in its regular session last evening and with William Foster, J. E. Tinsman, H. G. Maritz, Roy Baker, John Gault, F. R. Dill, W. T. Maasov, A. H. Collins, J. P. Hardy and President J. W. Fitzsimmons present. Superintendent J. S. Johnston of the West Penn explained the removal of the Chautauqua banners from the poles of the company, saying that he had been criticized quite severely for this but had taken the matter up in the superintendent's meeting in Connellsville recently and all of the superintendents were in favor of adhering to the rule that no streamers or banners should be fastened to the poles. He had refused permission for the hanging of the streamers, he said. The reason for this is that banners and ropes get mixed with the wires and sometimes draw them together throwing high power currents into house wires, and causing damage, while large banners getting wet and with ropes shrinking have done great harm to poles and wires. This latter part of the explanation he made after the meeting.

An ordinance was passed that no horses or automobiles shall be allowed to stand on Pittsburgh street from Broadway to Chestnut street on Broadway from Market street to Mulberry street, or on Spring street from Pittsburgh street to Mulberry street longer than 30 minutes. A fine of $1 is levied. Burgess W. N. Porter said after the meeting that he will not sign the ordinance as he believes it unwise and unjust.

The borough also bought in 21 of its $500 bonds running from 1912 to 1937, at $13,537.55, and council ordered the bonds cancelled. This is the first time in the history of the borough that this has been done.

CHAUTAUQUA PARADE

There were about 20 automobiles in the Chautauqua parade last evening, headed by Ruth's truck carrying the Grand Army Band. They traversed the main streets and made quite a showing with banners flying and the attention called to the coming week of Chautauqua which begins on Sunday. Will prove beneficial. The sale of tickets is now sold to run over 700.

THIN PEOPLE PUT ON FLESH EASILY IN SUMMER

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 to 20 pounds of healthy, strong flesh, will find no better time to secure such result than in the hot summer months. Surprising gains in weight are often made by thin people in June, July and August. Thin folks say this because their assimilative organs do not absorb sufficient of the food making elements of the food that is eaten. With such a physical defect it is often difficult to gain weight in winter because the food is not so well assimilated. The little nourishment that is absorbed is used to keep the blood warm rather than to provide flesh and fat.

For this reason, they were built to stay thin should take advantage of Nature's laws at this season and make a determined effort to put on some flesh and begin the use of a good standard flesh builder like Sargol while the hot days are here. There is a good test worth trying this summer. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one ounce with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first four weeks by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same as you are eating. Now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. Leading druggists in Connellsville and vicinity sell it in large boxes—sixty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back—ADV.

GANGWAY!!

OLD LADY NUMBER 31

BY LOUISE FORSSLEND
AUTHOR OF "THE STORY OF SARAH," "THE SHIP OF DREAMS," ETC.

More than one faded, fragrant romance is revealed in the chapters of this lovely little story. Through it runs like a golden thread, the tender devotion of the aged husband and wife.

CHAPTER I.

The Tea Table.

Angelina's slender, wiry form and small, glossy gray head bent over the squat brown teapot as she shook out the last bit of loaf from the canister. The canister was no longer hers, neither the teapot, nor even the battered old powder spoon with which she tapped the bottom of the tin to dislodge the last flitter of tea-dust. The three had been sold at auction that day in response to the auctioneer's inquiry, "What am I bid for the lot?"

Nothing in the familiar old kitchen was hers, Angelina reflected, except Abraham, her aged husband, who was taking his last gentle ride in the old rocking chair—the old armchair with painted roses blooming as brilliantly across its back as they had bloomed when the chair was first purchased forty years ago. Those roses had come to be a source of perpetual wonder to the old wife, an over-present example.

Neither time nor stress could wilt them a single leaf. When Abe took the first mortgage on the house in order to invest in an indefinitely located Mexican gold mine, the melon-drops of one of its keys, but the roses nodded on with the same old sunny hope, when Abe had to take the second mortgage and Tandy told he came to a foreman's lot in conversation, the minute hand fell off the parlor clock, but the flowers on the back of the old chair blossomed on none the less sunnily.

The soil grew more and more barren as the years went by; but still the roses had kept fresh and young, so why, argued Angelina, should not she? If old age and the pinch of poverty had failed to conquer their valiant spirit, why should she listen to the croaking tale? If they bloomed on with the same crimson flush of color, though the rockers beneath them had grown warped and the body of the chair cracked and groined every time one ventured to sit in it, why should she not ignore the stiffness which the years seemed to bring to her joints, the complaints which her body threatened every now and again to utter, and face herself, a hardy, unflinching, bravely facing life's water-torments?

Even this dreary day had not taken one fraction of a shade from the glory of the roses, as Angelina could see in the bud at one side of Abraham's head and the full-blown flower below his right ear; so why should she droop because the sale of her household goods had been somewhat disappointing? Somewhat? When the childless old couple, still selling under the banner of a charity-forbidding price, became practically reduced to their last copper, just as Abe's joints were "giving up" after a five-years' siege of rheumatism, and decided to sell all their worldly possessions, apart from their patched and threadbare wardrobe and a few meager keepsakes, they had depended upon raising at least two hundred dollars, one-half of which was to secure Abe a berth in the Old Men's home at Indian Village, and the other half to make Angelina comfortable for life, if a little lonely, in the Old Ladies' home in their own native hamlet of Shoreville. Both institutions had been generously endowed by the same settler, and were separated by a distance of but five miles.

"Eight as was to be five hundred, with my rheumatism an' yer weak heart," Abraham had growled when Angelina first proposed the plan as the only dignified solution to their problem of living. "But," the little wife had rejoined, "it'll be a mite o' comfort a-knowin' a body's so near, even at yer can't git ter em."

Now, another solution must be found to the problem, for the auction was over, and instead of two hundred dollars they had succeeded in raising but one hundred dollars and two cents. "That air two cents was fer the powder-sifter," inwardly mourned Angelina, "an' it's with double an' triple, fer it's been a good friend ter me fer nigh on ter eight year."

"Tew cents on the second hundred," said Abe for the tenth time. "I've counted it over an' over. One hundred dollars an' tew pecky pennies. An' I never hear a man tell so many lies in his life as that air auctioneer. Yew'd a thought he was scoldin' on the capery o' Rooster. Hif-guy, it seemed splendid. Just off I thought he'd raise us more 'n we expected. An' maybe he would have tew. Any?"

A bit ruefully, "at yer 'd' a lot me advertise a little sooner. I don't suppose half Shoreville knows yit that we was gwine ter have a auction sale."

He watched the elder being in her cheeks with a curious mixture of pride in her pride and regret at its consequences. "It's so we a-takin', mother, pride an' poverty makes money bedfellows."

He leaned back in the old chair, breaking out a dismal echo to the auctioneer's "Going, going, gone!" while the flush deepened in Angelina's cheek. Again she fastened her gaze upon the indomitable red rose which hung a pendant earring on the right side of Abraham's head.

"Tew wouldnt' a had folks a-comin' here ter bid jest out o' charity, would yew?" she demanded. "An' anyhow," in a more gentle tone—the gently positive tone which she had acquired through forty years of living with Abraham—"we hain't so bad off with one hundred dollars an' tew cents, an'—beholden ter nobody! It's tew cents more'n yew need ter git yew inter the Old Men's, an' them extry tew cents 'll pervide fer me jest bewtiful." Abraham stopped rocking to stare hard at his resourceful wife, an involuntary twinkle of amusement in his blue eyes. With increased firmness, she repeated, "jest bewtiful!" whereupon Abe, scenting self-sacrifice on his wife's part, sat up straight and snapped, "Haww so, haww so, mother?"

"I'll buy postage stamp, won't it?"—she was fairly aggressive now—"an' that's an envelop what wa'n't put up ter auction in the cupboard an' a paper bag I kin iron out—ketch me agwine fer the neighbors an' a-beggin' fer writing paper—an' I'll jest sit down an' write a line to Miss Holmes. Her house hain't a stun's throw from the Old Men's; an' I'll offer ter come an' take keer o' them air young 'uns o' her's fer my board an' keep an'—ten cents a week. I was agwine ter say a quarter, but I don't want ter impose on nobody. Seem that they hain't over well-to-do. I would go ter 'em, but I got ter have somethin' ter keep up appearances on, so yew won't have no call ter feel ashamed of me when I come a-visitin' ter the hum." Involuntarily, as she spoke, Angelina lifted her knotted old hand and smoothed back the hair from her brow; for through all the struggling years she had kept a certain, not unpleasant, girlish pride in her personal appearance.

Abraham had risen with creaks of his rheumatic joints, and was now walking up and down the room, his feet lifted slowly and painfully with every step, yet still his blue eyes flashing with the fire of indignant protest.

"No a-bunkin' comfortable in the Old Men's, an' yew a-takin' keer o' them Halsey young 'uns fer ten cents a week! I wouldn't take keer o' 'em fer ten cents a short breath. That be young 'uns an' young 'uns," he elucidated, "but they be tartar! Yew'd be in yer grave afore the first frost, an' yew gwine ter bury yew—the town? His tone became gentle and broken. "No, no, Angelina. Yew be a good gal, an' dew just as we calculated on Yew find the Old Ladies'; yew've got friends over ther, yew'll git along splendid. An' I'll git along tew. Yer know"—throwing his shoulders back, he assumed the light, bantering tone so familiar to his wife—"the poor-house doors is always open, I'd jest admire ter go ther. Ther's a rocking chair in every room, and they say the grub is a No. 1." He winked at her, smiling his broadest smile in his attempt to deceive.

Both wink and smile, however, were lost upon Angelina, who was busy dividing the apple sauce in such a way that Abe would have the larger share without suspecting it, hoping the while that he would not notice the absence of butter at this late home meal. She herself had never believed in buttering bread when there was "meat" to eat with it; but Abe's extravagant tastes had always carried him to the point of desiring both butter and sauce as a relish to his loaf.

"Now, fur's I'm concerned," paraded Abe, "I hain't got nothin' agin' the poorhouse fer neither man nor woman. I'd as lief let yew go ther 'n me; fur I know yew well that what yew're a-havin' out fer ter do. Yew, yew, mother, yew can't fool me. But think what folks would say! Think what they would say! They'd say, 'Ther's Abe a-takin' his comfort in the Old men's hum, an' Angelina, she's a-eatin' her heart out in the poor-house!'"

Angelina had, indeed, determined to be the one to go to the poorhouse; but all her life long she had cared, perhaps to a faulty degree, for "what folks would say." Above all, she cared now for what they had said and what they still might say about her husband and this final ending to his downhill road. She rested her two hands on the table and looked hard at the apple sauce until it danced before her eyes. She could not think with any degree of clearness. Vaguely she wondered if their supper would dance out of sight before they could sit down to eat it. So many of the good things of life had vanished ere she and Abe could touch their lips to them. Then she felt his shaking hand upon her shoulder and heard him mutter with husky tenderness:

"My dear, this is the last chance since we've been married that I've had to take the worst of it. Don't say a word agin' it now, mother, don't yer. I've brought yer ter this pass. Lemme bear the brunt o' it."

Ah, the greatest good of all had not vanished, and that was the love they bore one to the other. The sunshine came flooding back into mother's heart. She lifted her face, beautiful, rosy, eternally young. This was the man for whom she had gladly risked want and poverty, the displeasure of her own people, almost half a century ago. Now at last she could point him out to all her little world and say, "See, he gives me the red side of the apple!" She lifted her eyes, two bright sapphires swimming with the diamond dew of unshed, happy tears. "I'm a-thinkin', mother," she twittered, "that know me an' yew be agwine so fur apart, we be a-gittin' closer together in spore than we've ever been afore."

Abe bent down softly to brush her cheek with his rough beard, and then, awkward, as when a boy of sixteen he had first kissed her, shy, ashamed at this approach to a return of the old-time love making, he seated himself at the small, bare table.

This warped, hill-and-dale table of the drop-leaves, which had been brought from the attic only today after routing through the clouds, had served as their first dining-table when the honeymoon was young. Abe thoughtfully drummed his hand on the board, and as Angelina brought the teapot and set down opposite him, he recalled:

"We had bread an' tea an' apple sauce the day we set up housekeepin', dew yew remember, Angel?"

"I burned the apple sauce," she supplemented, whereupon the clouds, and Angelina went on with a thrill of genuine gladness over the fact that he remembered the details of that long-ago honeymoon as well as she. "Yew don't mind havin' no butter to night, dew yer, father?"

He recalled how he had said to her at that first simple home meal: "Yew don't mind bein' poor with me, dew yer, Angel?" Now, with a silent shake of his head, he saw at her young, smiling how it would seem to eat at table when her face no longer looked at him across the board, to sleep at night when her faithful hand no longer lay within reach of his own. She lifted her teacup, he lifted his, the two gazing at each other over the rims, both half-dressed, half-comforted by the fact that love still remained their toastmaster after the passing of all the years. Of a sudden Angelina exclaimed, "We forgot yer grace." Shocked and comical, they covered their eyes with their trembling hands and murmured together: "Dear Lord, we thank thee this day for our daily bread."

Angelina opened her eyes to find the red roses cheerfully facing her from the back of the rocking chair. A robin had hopped upon the window sill just outside the patched and rusty screen and was joyfully caroling to her his views of life. Through the window vines in which the bird was almost nestled the sunlight sifted softly into the striped, bare and lonely room. Angelina felt strangely encouraged and comforted. The roses became symbolic to her of the "lilies of the field which toil not, neither do they spin." The robin was one of the "two sparrows sold for a farthing, and one of them shall not fall to the ground without their Father's will" while the sunlight seemed to call out to the little old lady who hoped and believed and loved much: "Fear ye not therefore. Ye are of more value than many sparrows!"

CHAPTER II.

"Good-by."

When the last look of parting had been given to the old kitchen and the couple passed out of doors, hushed and trembling, they presented an inconspicuously brave, gaily-dressed appearance. Both were dressed in the best. To be sure, Abraham's Sunday suit had long since become his only, everyday suit as well, but he wore his Sabbath-day hat, a beaver of ancient design, with an air that cast its reflection over all his apparel. Angelina had on a black silk gown as shiny as the freshly polished stove she was leaving in her kitchen—a gown which testified from its voluminous hem to the soft yellow net at the throat that Angelina was as neat a mender and darning as could be found in Suffol county.

A black silk bonnet snugged close to her head, from under its brim peeping a single pink rose. Every spring for ten years Angelina had renewed the youth of this rose by treating its petals with the tender red dye of a hudding oak.

Under the pink rose a soft pink flush bloomed on either of the old lady's cheeks. Her eyes flashed with unconquerable pride, and her square, iron chin held very high; for now, indeed, she was glad, with better of what "folks would say" to this home leaving, and it was a bright June afternoon, too clear for an umbrella with which to hide one's face from prying neighbors, too late in the day for a sunshade.

Angelina tucked the green-black affair which served them as both under her arm and swung Abe's figured old carpetbag in her hand with the manner of one setting out on a pleasant journey. Abe, though resting heavily on his stout, crooked cane, dragged behind him Angel's little horsehair trunk upon a creaking, old, unusually large toy express wagon which he had bought at some forgotten auction long ago. "The husband and wife passed into the garden between borders of box-wood, beyond which nodded the boards of Angel's carefully tended, outdoor "children"—her roses, her snowballs, her sweet-smelling syringas, her wax-like bleeding-hearts and her shrub of bridal-wreath.

"Just a minute," she murmured, as Abe would have hastened on to the gate. She bent her proud head and kissed with fervent, half-shamed passion a dusty white spray of the bridal-wreath. Now overtopping the "husband's" silk hat, the shrub had not come so high as his knee when they two had planted it nearly a half-century ago.

"Yew mine!" Angel's heart cried out to the shrub and to every growing thing in the garden. "Yew mine. I planted yew, tended yew, loved yew into growing. Yew're all the children I ever had, an' I love yew." But the old wife did not pluck a single flower, for she could never bear to see a blossom wither in her hand, while all she said aloud was: "I'm glad 'twas Miss Holmes that bought in the house. They say she's a great hand ter dig in the garden."

Angel's voice faltered. Abe did not answer. Something had caused a swimming before his eyes which he did not wish his wife to see; so he fell the handle of the express wagon and, bending, to show back, plucked a sprig of "old-man." Though he could not have expressed his sentiments in words, the garden brought poignant recollections of the hopes and promises which had thrown their rose color about the young days of his marriage. His hopes had never blossomed into fulfillment. His promises to the little wife had been choked by the weeds of his own inefficiency. Worse than this, the bursting into bloom of seeds of selfish recklessness in himself was what had turned the garden of their life into an arid waste. And now, in their dry and withered old age, he and Angel were being torn up by the roots, dung as so much rubbish by the roadside.

"Mother, I be dretful sorry ter take yew away from yer posies," muttered Abraham as he arose with his green aprig in his hand.

With shaking fingers, Angel sought a pin hidden beneath her basque. "Further, shall I pin yer 'old-man' in yer buttonhole?" she quavered. Then as he stood for a moment to show back, she whispered: "I wouldn't care, 'cept ter what folks may say. Let's hurry before any one sees us. I told everybody that we wa'n't agwine ter break up till tomorrow mornin'."

Fortunately, there was a way across lots to the Old Ladies' home, an unfrequented by-path over a field and through a bit of woodland, which would bring the couple almost unobserved to a side gate.

Under ordinary circumstances Angelina would never have taken this path, for it exposed her carefully patched and newly polished shoes to scratches, her fragile, worn silk skirt and still, white petticoat to brambles. More over, the dragging of the loaded little wagon was more difficult here for Abraham. But they both preferred the narrower, rougher way to facing the curious eyes of all Shoreville now, he pitying windows of the village street.

As the couple came to the edge of woodland, they turned with one accord and looked back for the last glimpse of the home. Blazing gold-red against the kitchen window flamed the afternoon sunlight.

"Look a' that!" Angel cried eagerly, as one who beholds a promise in the skies. "Tew see, father, yew couldn't 'a' made out that window this fur as all of the sun had struck it jest so I declare! It seems almost as if we could see the rocker, dew. It's tew bad, Abe, that we had ter let yer old rocker go. I yew remember—" she laid her hand on his arm, and lifted her gaze, growing clouded and wistful, to his face. "When we bought the chair, we thought maybe some day I'd be lookin' a little better in it. Tew was then, yew rickoles, we sorter got in the habit of callin' each other 'father' an' 'mother.' I wonder of the young 'uns had come—"

"Le's hurry," interrupted Abe, almost gruffly. "Le's hurry."

They stumbled forward with bowed heads in silence, until of a sudden they were startled by a surprised hail of recognition, and looked up to find themselves confronted by a bent and gray old man, a village character, a harmless, slightly demented public charge known as "Jehmal" or "Captain Rover."

"Whar yew goin', Cap'n Rover?" The old couple had drawn back at the sight of the gentle vagabond, and Angel clutched at her husband's arm, her heart contracting at the thought that he, too, had become a pauper.

"I'm a-takin' my wife ter the old ladies over ther ter the hum," Abe answered, and would have passed on, shrinking from the sight of himself as reflected in poor Jehmal.

But the "innocent" placed himself in their path.

"Yew ain't agoin' ter the 'em tew?" he bantered.

Abe forced a laugh to his lips in response. "No, no, I'm goin' over ter Yaphank ter board on the county."

Again the couple would have passed on, their faces flushed, their eyes lowered, had not Jehmal flung out one hand to detain them while he plunged the other hurriedly into his pocket. "Here," he drew out a meager handful of nickels and pennies, his vacant smile grown wistful. "Here, take it, Cap'n Rover. It's all I got. I can't count it myself, but yew can. Don't yew think it's enough ter set yew up in business, so yew won't have ter go ter the poorhouse? The poorhouse is a bad place. I was there last winter. I don't like the poorhouse."

He rambled on of the poorhouse. Angel, panting for breath, one hand against the smothering pain at her heart, was crying, with the other, to draw "father" along. "Father" was shaking his head at Jehmal, at the proffered nickels and pennies—shaking his head and choking. At length he found his voice, and was able to smile at his would-be benefactor with even the ghost of a twinkle in his eye.

"Much obliged, Cap'n Rover; but yew keep yer money fer tobacco. I ain't so high-toned as yew. I'll take real comfort at the poorhouse. S'v'ing; thank yew. S'long."

Jehmal went on his way muttering to himself, unhappily joggling his rejected alms, while Angel and Abe resumed their journey.

As they came to the gate of the Old Ladies' home Angel seized hold of her husband's arm, and looking up into his face pleaded earnestly:

"Father, let's take the hundred dollars fer a family tombston an' go ter the poorhouse together!"

He shook her off almost roughly and lifted the latch of the gate.

"Folks 'd say we was crazy, mother." "Folks" was no one he might as be dragged in the express cart and laid down the handle. Before him was a long, clean-swept path ending apparently in a mass of shrubbery; to the left was a field of sweet corn reaching to the hedge; to the right a strong and sturdy growth of pole lima beans; and just within the entrance, beneath the sweeping plumage of a weeping willow tree, was a shabby but inviting green bench.

Abe's glance wandered from the bench to his wife's face. Angel could not lift her eyes to him; with bowed head she was watching and unlatching the gate through which he must pass. He looked at the sun and thoughtfully made reckon of the time. There were still two hours before he could take the train whist—

"Let's go set down a spell afore—" he faltered—"afore we say good-by."

She made no answer. She told herself over and over that she must—simply must—stop that "all-of-a-tremble" feeling which was going on inside of her. She stepped from the gate to the bench blindly, with Abe's hand on her arm, though, still blindly, with exaggerated care she placed his carpetbag on the grass beside her.

He laid down his cane, took off his high hat and wiped his eyes. He looked at her anxiously. Still she could not lift her blurred eyes, nor could she check her trembling. Seeing how she shook, he passed his arm around her shoulder. He murmured something—what, neither he nor she knew—but the love of his youth spoke in the murmur, and again fell the silence.

Angel's eyes cleared. She struggled to speak, agitated at the thought that life itself might be done before ever they could have one hour together again, but no words came. So much—so much to say! She reached out her hand to where he rested upon his knee. Their fingers gripped, and each felt a sense of dreary cheer to know that the touch was speaking what the tongue could not utter.

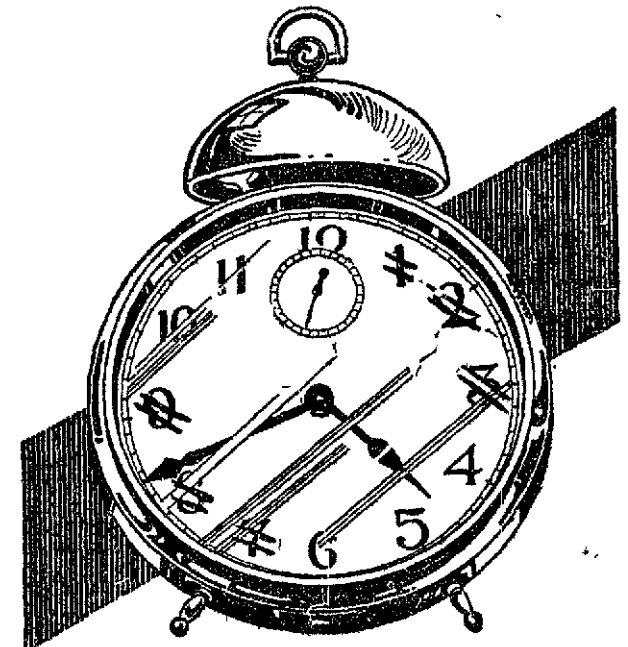

Time passed swiftly. The silent hour sped on. The young blades of corn gossiped gently along the field. Above, the branches of the willow swished and swayed to the rhythm of the soft south wind.

"How still, how still it is!" whispered the breeze.

"Rest, rest, rest!" was the lullaby swish of the willow.

The old wife nestled closer to Abraham until her head touched his shoulder. He laid his cheek against her hair and the carefully preserved old bonnet. Involuntarily she raised her hand, trained by the years of pinching economy, to lift the fragile rose into a safer position. He smiled at her action; then his arm closed about her spasmodically and he swallowed a lump in his throat.

The afternoon was waning. Gradually over the turmoil of their hearts stole the garden's June-time spirit of gray repose.

They leaned even closer to each other. The gray of the old man's hair mingled with the gray beneath Angelina's little bonnet. Slowly his eyes closed. Then even as Angel wondered who would watch over the slumbers of his worn old age in the poorhouse, she, too, fell asleep.

Old Civil Service Examination. Lady Dorothy Nevill in one of her books gave an amusing example of the style of examination for posts in the British civil service which prevailed before the advent of the competitive system. The young candidate was ushered into the room of the old chief clerk of the department, and this ordeal followed:

"Sit down, sir," roared a voice of thunder. Then after a painful pause: "Now, sit, attention. I shall examine you in arithmetic."

"Shall I not have pen and paper?" "No, sir," thundered out the tyrant voice. "Attention! How much are two and two?"

Paralyzed by the voice and sudden question, the youth stared and then gasped out quite seriously: "Four, sir."

"Quite right, sir," roared out the examiner, slapping him on the back. "You'll do, sir."

But the question surely should have been, "How many blue beams make grey?"

Heard on a Train.

"Is my wife forward?" asked the passenger on the limited. "She wasn't to me, sir," answered the conductor politely.—Purple Cow.

Enlarged Dry Goods Store

This important selling-place stands alone in the quality of its goods, the variety and reasonable pricing.

Here, we go beyond the best shown in other stores. We are the first to show the newer things and our stocks of staples are largest in town. Recently the department was enlarged and all the various sections increased the quantity and variety of their goods. We show more novelties and really exclusive merchandise than you will see outside the store.

The list of clearance priced goods is a proof positive that you can have finer goods, clean and fresh, for a great deal less than elsewhere; and much that you can get nowhere else.
